

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

February 24, 2006

The British Second Wives Club celebrates its first anniversary on 1st March 2006.

Linda Robertson, the founder of The British Second Wives Club said:

“The British Second Wives Club was formed by myself last year when I was going through a very frustrating time with my partner’s divorce and child contact issues and I found there was nowhere for me to turn to for support” said Linda. “From the very first day we have received continuous emails and telephone calls from second wives who are grateful to have found The British Second Wives Club”.

“The most common reaction when suffering second wives find us is relief!” said Linda. “Many second wives feel totally isolated by the bitterness displayed towards them, their husband and sometimes the children, by the ex wife. Often the ex wife continues to stew in her bitterness for many years after the divorce, years after everyone else has moved on with their lives”.

“We are delighted how many second wives have joined us so far. Everyone knows the first year for any organisation can be very difficult but this goes to show how many second families are still suffering at the hands of the controlling ex wife and how the British legal system is failing to protect the second wife and the children” said Linda.

“The British Second Wives Club has big plans for the future” said Linda. “We look forward to the coming years as an ever growing club of friendly faces who care and understand the situation of many second wives who have suffered in silence for too long!”
